COFFEE PROFILES

Acidity

A snappy, sharp taste that can be desirable or overwhelming. (Not the Ph of a coffee)

Aroma

Smell can bring out flavours the tongue cannot taste. There are hundreds of coffee aromatics, some examples being floral, citrus, chocolate, and caramel.

Body

Can be described as 'mouth feel' or 'weight.' It's how the coffee feels inside the mouth.

Bitterness

In moderation, bitterness isn't negative because it contributes to a balanced flavours profile. However, when it overpowers other notes, it becomes undesirable.

Coffee actually possesses over six times more flavours than wine. According to some sources coffee has as many as 1,500 aromatic characteristics – in comparison to the 200 flavours found in wine.

Divorce due to Lack of Coffee

Centuries ago in Turkey, coffee was such an integral part of life that it was lawful for a wife to file for divorce if her husband did not satisfy her coffee needs.
